The Dangers of Occultism

by Jen Arnold

We live in a society today where we see an ever-increasing rejection of God in a variety of ways. That said, turning away from God is actually contrary to human nature. "The desire for God is written in the human heart, because man is created by God and for God; and God never ceases to draw man to himself" (CCC #27). We, as a human race, inherently want to know God and all that comes with knowing him. Without God, in our weak humanity, we attempt to understand things in ways that leave us unsatisfied and longing for more.

We, as Christians, have a natural dependency on God. We acknowledge that the trials he sends us are, in some way, a benefit to our spiritual lives, helping us to depend on him more. We do not believe that earth is all there is and we have the hope of heaven because of what Jesus Christ came to do for us. These beliefs allow for a certain peace and a sense of letting go in our lives. However, there are those who do not believe in God and his divine hand in all things. They tend to seek to have some control, not only in their own lives, but also in the world. This idea of man as the master of his own universe has led to an increase in occultism, which is concisely defined as the belief in or study of human action or the influence of supernatural or supernatural powers. In other words, if a person does not believe that supernatural or supernatural powers are of God alone, then they will be prone to think they can have some control over such things. This tendency of mankind is covered in part three of the Catechism. Not surprisingly, it is placed in a section titled "You shall have no other gods before me." When a person tries to control or influence what properly belongs to God in the supernatural realm, they are essentially attempting to be God, or a god, themselves. This is an extreme form of the sin of pride to think that you can supersede God's own will or power in a situation and then bend it according to your own will. Now, let's take a closer look at the specific ways people do this and what the Church has to say about it.

The first issue the Catechism addresses is superstition. Superstition is the belief that one thing causes something else on a supernatural level. We know of various superstitions and perhaps have entertained some of them. For example, an athlete might perform a specific ritual before every game to help him win. Another person may have "lucky" numbers that will one day win her the lottery. The reality is that, regardless of correlation or lack thereof, none of it amounts to causation. Good things don't happen when you believe in the power of an external thing. Good things happen because of God's grace in your life. Likewise, bad things don't happen because of the power of some external thing. Bad things happen because God allows it for some greater good, which you ought to seek to recognize. However, superstition is not relegated to the secular world. The Catechism warns that even those of us within the Faith can fall into superstition dispositions regarding things like our prayers and sacramentals (cf. CCC #2111). For example, thinking that praying a particular novena will definitely produce a certain outcome would be wrong. Also, to place an overemphasis on the supernatural power of your scapular as a physical item is superstition. Rather, our prayers and sacramentals should serve as reflections of our belief in the Almighty God and what he does for us through them. Our Catholic Faith gives us so many wonderful outward expressions of our beliefs, but we must be very careful not to believe in those things and items themselves.

Next, the Catechism moves to idolatry. Idolatry is to worship anyone, or anything in place of, or over, the one true God, and it can manifest itself in a wide variety of ways. Of course, there is classic idolatry, which is paganism and the belief in many gods.

There has been an increase in paganism recently, particularly in younger generations, where there has emerged an unhealthy curiosity, obsession, and practice of Celtic, Norse, and other types of paganism. This includes building altars, making seasonal offerings, and performing various rituals — such as a fertility ritual — to these pagan entities, either to pay them undue homage or to achieve a desired outcome. This is an obvious betrayal of the true altar and sacrifice of Jesus Christ, to whom all honor is owed and through whom all things are made new (cf. CCC #2112).

Just as with superstition, even the faithful can fall into idolatry. If we are not making God the most important part of our life, other ideas or things can easily rise above him. Work, success, money, and status are all common forms of idolatry in today's world. However, there are other more subtle forms of idolatry that can creep in. For example, it may be so important to you that people think well of you that you hide your authentic self, and thus who you are in private is extremely different from who you are in public. This is a lack of humility. Or perhaps you put your marriage or your children at the center of your life. While seemingly good, this is still idolatry when they're valued above God or without recognition of how the grace of God works through them. If you have a tendency to idolize certain things in your life, remember that God has historically shown that he has a way of taking any of these things away in order to get your attention back to where it should be — on him (CCC #2113-14).

All forms of divination are to be rejected: recourse to Satan or demons, conjuring up the dead or other practices falsely supposed to "unveil" the future. Consulting horoscopes, astrology, palm reading, interpretation of omens and lots, the phenomenon of clairvoyance, and recourse to mediums all conceal a desire for power over time, a history, and, in the last analysis, other human beings, as well as a wish to conciliate hidden powers. They contradict the honor, respect, and loving fear that we owe to God alone.
(CCC #2116)

We see here that by doing these things, we are attempting to control what we have no right to control. However, there is more to it than just our own involvement. You see, the demons have great insight into our egos and pride and use these things to their advantage in attacking us. They use these types of practices as portals, either to enter directly into us or into our lives, with the purpose of leading us deeper into sin and away from God. What's more, their influence is not dependent on our ignorance or knowledge. If we open the door and invite them in, whether we know we're doing it or not, they will fatter. These acts are very dangerous practices; the world that has lost sight of God seeks answers and control.

Your challenge for this week is to pray. Pray for all the poor, lost souls who are trying to follow what is written on their heart, but who are seeking God in all the wrong ways and all the wrong places. Pray strongly that Satan and his demons relinquish their chokehold on our society and send them to the foot of the cross. Also pray for any of the subtle superstitions and idolatries to be erased from your own life and the life of your family. This is a time when we need all eyes firmly fixed on God, now more than ever.

Book of Remembrance

Available This Weekend

As we prepare to celebrate All Souls Day on November 2, a Book of Remembrance will be placed in the narthex beginning this weekend. Parishioners are invited to write the names of deceased family members, friends, and loved ones in the book so that they may be remembered in the prayers of our parish throughout the month of November.

The tradition of remembering the faithful departed is deeply rooted in the Church's belief in the Communion of Saints, the spiritual bond that unites those in Heaven, the souls being purified, and the faithful on earth. Catholics have prayed for the dead since the earliest centuries of Christianity, a practice that reflects our hope in Christ's promise of eternal life. The annual observance of All Souls Day on November 2 became widespread in the Church after it was promoted by St. Odilo of Cluny in the 10th century and eventually adopted throughout the Catholic world.

The Book of Remembrance developed as a visible expression of this tradition. By inscribing the names of our loved ones, we entrust them to God's mercy and unite them with the prayers of the parish community. Throughout November, the Church especially remembers "all the faithful departed," and many parishes place a Book of Remembrance near the sanctuary or in another prominent location as a reminder to pray for those who have gone before us in faith.

We encourage all parishioners to take a moment to add the names of those they wish to remember. As we gather for Mass and personal prayer during November, may we continue this beautiful Catholic tradition of offering prayers for the dead and placing our trust in the resurrection promised by Christ.

Our Book of Remembrance will be in the narthex this weekend and will then be placed in the sanctuary.

"Eternal rest grant unto them, O Lord, and let perpetual light shine upon them. May they rest in peace. Amen."

(Catechism of the Catholic Church, 2240)

As we enter the early voting period of the general election, let us call to mind our Catholic and American duty to our great country, by participating in this year's election. Let us also, as Catholics, approach our ballot with a well-formed, and informed, conscience, keeping in mind that our Catholic faith supersedes any political party. Our Church and Her teachings on faith and morals must always be our guide when choosing candidates who will uphold the moral order.

"Moral principles do not depend on a majority vote. Wrong is wrong, even if everybody is wrong. Right is right, even if nobody is right."
